

GANS BADLY STING ON NELSON'S TERMS

Gets Short End of Purse and No Moving Picture Royalties.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 10.—The articles for the Labor Day fight between Joe Gans, the negro pugilist, of Baltimore, and Battling Nelson, of Hagerstown, Md., champion lightweight of the world, have been signed, $1,000 posted by each fighter to bind the match, and today Gans is a lot more bitter than he was on July 5, the day following his fight with Nelson.

The deal the negro received from Willus Britt, manager of Nelson, is a lot tougher than that which he received from Nelson in the ring. According to agreement signed Nelson gets $20,000 of the $30,000 purse, win, lose, or draw, while Gans will have to be content with $10,000. Nelson will have a two-thirds interest in the moving pictures to be made of the fight, and the club a one-third interest. Gans will have none. The men will weigh in at 133 pounds ringside.

"Just wait," said Gans today, "Nelson is the dictator now, and I'll fall for his game without whimpering. But I'll square with him for the dirty terms on Labor Day, and after that when he fights me he will eat dirt, the same as he is making me do today."

Battling's Profits.

Nelson cleared up $14,000 by his victory over Gans in their recent battle, including his share for winning, and also the side bets he made on the fight. The gross receipts of the fight, according to the figures given out by Jim Coffroth, manager of the club, amounted to $24,832. Of this sum the fighters received 70 per cent—$17,382.40. As they fought on a basis of 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser, Nelson, for being the victor, was handed $10,303.20, while Gans, for being knocked out, received $6,988.80. Nelson bet $3,000 on his chances.

SHAKE-UP IMMINENT ON YANKEE SQUAD

Failure of Experiments Forces
Elberfeld to More Radical Changes—Rumored Deals.

NEW YORK, July 10.—It appears very much as if things are framing for one grand shake-up on the Yankee team. Manager Elberfeld, since assuming the reins of government, has experimented in diverse manners with the material on hand, but all to no avail. The club simply cannot win, apparently, as new material is being brought in, and new faces will no doubt be in our midst.

Frank Deleahanty, who was with New York a couple of seasons ago, but who left in a huff because Griffith wouldn't raise his pay, has been signed. He is coming on from Cleveland immediately and will be tried in left field. Jake Stahl hasn't proved a success in the outfield, and he will be given a rest for a while. Jake knows he cannot play the garden, and this worries him so that he has fallen away off in batting. A switch in the infield is also inevitable. Niles is anything but a success at the hot-catcher position, and is every likelihood of his taking a rest when Conroy comes around.

There will be a parting of some of the dead wood mighty soon. The club has asked for waivers on Doc Newton, who is sadly off color. Efforts are being made to get a new pitcher or two, and there is some hope of landing Mueller, Newar's star slug man. Several trades are in prospect, but just what they are has not been divulged.

Certain Detroit officials hinted that they would like awfully well to get hold of one of New York's young catchers, preferably Blair. Detroit is very weak in the back-stopping department, and would sacrifice a good man for a catcher of class. Dave Jones is being the Detroit bench all the time, and he is a mighty good outfielder.

STANDARD SWAMPS FAST ADITH NINE

The Standard Athletic Club defeated the Adith Israel Sunday School baseball team at Marshall Hall by 11 to 3.

The feature was the batting of Berlin and Gorman for the winners.

Johnson Couldn't Keep Ball From Center of the Plate

Fear of Wild Pitch Responsible For Hits By White and Hahn—Present Pitchers Records Entirely Worthless—An Illustration.

By THOMAS S. RICE.

Anyhow, Washington not only scored on Doc White, but got an earned run off him. That was so much better than ever seemed likely to come to pass that it offers many comforting reflections which tend to make us forget that raw bit of judgment displayed by Ganley in going after Hahn's fly.

So weird was the form reversal displayed by Walter Johnson in the third and fourth innings yesterday, which resulted in Chicago beating Washington by 5 to 3, that some explanation was necessary. When Johnson was asked about the sad affair he said he was deeply depressed, but said:

"I felt fine, and my arm was good, but I simply couldn't get the ball to roll off my fingers properly in the third and fourth innings. It wouldn't curve so I could tell where it was going, and I couldn't even throw a perfectly straight ball with any confidence. When Doc White came to bat in the third, after Sullivan had walked, I tried every way I knew to get the ball over the corner for him, but the delivery was so erratic I was afraid of a wild pitch, and in my desire to avoid that I gave him one straight over the heart of the plate, where he could have hit it with his eyes shut."

"My experience with Hahn was exactly the same. I was aiming to give him a high one close to his body that would keep him from getting a free swing, but instead the ball sailed over the middle of the pan, and he got a ton of substance into it. In the fifth inning I was still having trouble, but after that I became better, although I was bothered by lack of control all through the game."

Apart from the March hare delivery, Johnson was the goods, and should never have been beaten as bad as he was. A youngster who lets a team like Chicago down with three hits has done a proper share of work, and it is up to his support to make a few runs on its own account. In playing the great national game, your object is not to keep the other fellows from scoring, but to tally once in awhile for yourself. This is the policy recommended by all the critics, and is suggested to the Washington club in a perfectly friendly spirit.

Bob Ganley's error of judgment on Hahn's fly in the third inning was a poor point in the Nationals last night. Ganley played in short in left for Hahn, who is a left hander, and might ordinarily not be supposed to hit deeply in that direction. So far so good, and when Hahn hit over his head it was simply a case of outguessing the fielder, but the trouble was Ganley did not recognize the three-base features of the drive until it was too late for him to run back, either in the hope of catching it or of knocking it into submissiveness before it could count for more than a single. It was a bad play, all right, and vexed many of our leading rooters.

Walter Johnson is still a youngster, and should not let a little thing like that beating yesterday take his nerve.

Perhaps it was the fact that Jim D. Saffel was on the job again in the press box that caused the Nationals to lose such a measly exhibition after the good work of the day before.

Maybe in the golden summer, maybe in the dreary winter of about the year 2000 A. D. the major leagues will wake up and appear to umpires for every game. When George Davis threw wild yesterday trying to double up Shipke at first, it was largely an element of chance that caused Umpire Suk O'Loughlin to see that the ball went into the stand, hit a post and bounded out again. The ball had not gone to the right direction in which Suk was supposed to be looking at that time. One was to follow the ball behind first base, the other was to watch the runner going to second and preparing to wheel for third. Suppose the ball had not gone into the stand, but against the fence, was there not a fat chance for the runner to cut second without the umpire seeing him? Or, if he had kept his eye on the runner, as he was supposed to do, and which was enough of a job for one man, he would not have seen the ball go in and come out, and Washington would have lost a run. The major leagues are beefing about the lack of baseballs, and stating that it will only be a short time before there will be no admissions at that price because of the high and excessive prices demanded by their patrons. If such be the case, why don't the leagues open up their treasuries by appropriating salaries enough to prevent problems like that of yesterday, which so frequently arise? There is no excuse under the sun for the single umpire system except for the annual enthusiastic boost in stories of tearfully reacting presidents of the two big organizations.

The whole subject of scoring winning and losing pitchers is coming to the front more strongly than ever now—days because of the policy of managers in changing pitchers when they show signs of evaporating. At present the system is so poor that the figures are practically worthless. For instance, Falkenberg stands in the records as the best Washington pitcher, according to the number of games he is credited with winning, yet in the estimation of the fans and league managers he probably stands below any of the Washington heavers. A case in point arose in the second game on Wednesday. Burns resigned after the fourth inning with Washington two runs to the good and going strong. Falkenberg succeeded him, let Chicago earn a run in the seventh inning and gave such a horrible exhibition of collapse in the ninth that Chicago made two runs, tied the score and drove him from the box. Smith took up the burden in the tenth and in the thirteenth went to pieces, allowing Chicago to get three runs and the game, although the two runs above the one needed to win were scored on McBride's error. Now, for the rules, Smith, who started when the score was tied, was charged with a defeat, which is proper enough, but there is no black mark against Falkenberg to show that he threw away a contest which Washington had well in hand, and he will come out in the next week's averages with his list of winnings unimpaired and with no additions to his losses.

The law in all games of chance or sport is that a man can't lose where he doesn't have a chance to win. If Falkenberg had not been with the Sox beaten in that game, the victory would have been credited to Burns, who left Hahn bound with his team in the lead. Hence, the force of contention that Falkenberg should not be technically charged with the defeat is easily seen. But, on the other hand, his poor work in the minds of all present, directly responsible for Washington losing the game, should be something to show that fact. The present system, therefore, is absolutely erroneous, and demands serious and immediate attention for the conditions are growing worse every day with three and four pitchers to a side not an unusual feature.

Bill Burns against Nick Altrock is the card for this afternoon.

YANKEE MARKSMAN FINISHES SECOND

Captain Casey, of Delaware, Captures Silver Medal at First Day's Olympic Shoot

BISLEY, July 10.—The cosmopolitan character of the gathering of world's marksmen for the Olympic shoot was evidenced yesterday by the fourteen elements of different nations floating from flag staffs planted outside the administrative building of the National Rifle Association.

These flags represented the countries engaged in the international rifle shoot. The American marksmen, on the first day of the shoot, yesterday, captured the silver medal for the second best score in individual competition on the 100-yard range. The event was won by Colonel Milner, a member of the English team. Capt. K. V. Casey, of Delaware, who won the silver medal with the second highest score, was yesterday the bull's-eye with Colonel Milner, of the English team, until the ninth shot, when a treacherous gust of wind caused an unfortunate break in the sequence, his bullet counting only an outer. Casey immediately recovered and before the end of the day, he had an unbroken succession of bulls, and a total of 88 out of 100, to the American's 85. Blood was Ireland, third, with 81, and Kerr, of Canada, fourth, with 81.

NEW BOATHOUSE OPENS ITS DOORS

Commissioner Macfarland Guest of Honor at Potomac Club's Reception.

A representative gathering of oarsmen from the various clubs of this city and men high in official circles who were interested in aquatic joined hands last evening in the house-warming of Potomac Boat Club. The reception marked the formal opening of the club's handsome new boathouse, one of the most commodious south of Philadelphia, and as well equipped as any in this country. The entire building was thrown open to the inspection of the guests.

Commissioner Macfarland, the guest of honor, was introduced by Charles G. Warden, president of the club. He complimented the building committee on the success of its undertaking and expressed the hope that the opening of the clubhouse of one of Washington's most prominent aquatic organizations would be the beginning of a new era of rowing in this city. The Commissioner also advocated rowing as a clean sport and beneficial exercise and predicted that it would be only a short time until general interest in this form of sport would greatly increase.

At the conclusion of the address refreshments were served and the guests gave the ballroom its first try-out. The committee in charge of the entertainment last evening and the officers of the club follow:

Committee on arrangements—E. Richard Gasch, chairman; D. Spencer Bliss, Roy A. Dent, George W. Evans, J. C. McQuinn, Joseph T. Daly, George A. Herman, Erskine Gordon, Harry H. Walters, G. MAXWELL IS AFTER NEW MILE RECORD

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 10.—Early morning strollers along the Ventnor beach during the past three days have been given a glimpse of the new eight-cylinder Maxwell car being tried out with the object of breaking the world's twenty-eight second record for the straight mile. Greatest secrecy is being maintained by those in charge of the machine. They refuse to give out any information concerning the machine.

Interested spectators who have held watches against the runs declare that the big car has several times touched the thirty-second mark over the track used for the Atlantic City races. The trial will be continued until the drivers of the car are assured that they have solved the speed problem, when the car will be groomed for laurels in some of the big races.

Today's contest between the leaders of the league was a real test of skill. It is the last game of the series between the two teams. Shops having won two games, and Trainmen one. The winner of today's game should bring home the bunting.

In the first inning, with the cushions loaded, Callow pulled out a three-racker. It was one of the longest hits of the season and he could easily have made home if he had hurried.

McDonald and Miller pulled off a fast double in the first. McDonald caught Handy's grounder, touched Clark in a double, and Miller, who was hit by the ball in the time to catch Handy, Shannahan and Green also participated in a double. Shannahan speared Watson's speedy liner and threw Callow out at second.

Coach Yard landed on Kilroy in the first for six hits and five runs. Hughes pitched a good game in the early sessions, but he weakened toward the end, not enough, however, to lose the contest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE.

The last scheduled game of the season was played yesterday, and now the postponed and tie games will be run off. Pathany and Fifth play today.

A fast double play was pulled off in the opening session by Hands, Connor, and Kerper, which cut off what looked like a rally.

Gordon sent the Ninth Streeters down in one, two, three order in the first two innings.

After Elliott doubled in the sixth, Symonson tightened up and struck out the three following batters.

Elliott is battling like a fiend of late. He got in a double and two singles yesterday.

The second double play of the game came in the seventh inning. Wynkoop was hit and Evans nearly sacrificed him to second, but Wynkoop never stopped and was put out at third by a close decision after a beautiful slide.

Evans put up a fine game at short for fifth. When the dust had blown over he had two putouts and six assists to his credit.

Moreland was out with the Ninth team yesterday and put up a good game behind the bat. He also put one over the hill for two sacks.

McQuinn played a good game at first base yesterday, accepting sixteen putouts without an error.

"Dutch" Stuckert played a good game in center and clouted one over Stocker's head in left which went for four sacks.

COLUMBIA LEAGUE.

In the fourth Washington Heights took the lead and held it until the finish. Hannah made good stealing bases.

Dyer, on the slab for Washington Heights, struck form and kept the Brookland boys guessing most of the time.

Dyer made a home run in the fifth that was the feature of the game. Probably the longest drive of the season on the Columbia grounds.

Johnson knocked a neat three-racker in the fourth.

In the first a double from Hannah to Dyer to Hoover counted to good advantage for Washington Heights.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE.

Both teams played fast ball yesterday. Storer slipped a deal of up times in the field and Wallach once, but none of the errors were costly.

McMahon's pitching was one of the features. He struck out nine Wallachs, and did not issue a pass.

Haynie played the third cushion in gray style. He is credited with one put-out and six assists, some of which were quite difficult.

Carter supported McMahon perfectly behind the bat. Not a base was stolen on him.

CY YOUNG'S BENEFIT.

CHICAGO, July 10.—"Although this is decidedly irregular and may establish a bad precedent, we are willing to consent to a violation of the rules of the American League, which cannot do too much for Cy Young," said President Ban Johnson, as he gave official sanction to the proposed benefit for the Boston veteran pitcher.

The game will be between Detroit and Boston August 12, and President Johnson said the teams could frame up any sort of game they wished, even to the point of exchanging batteries, or any other feature that would draw big attendance.
